How To Estimate Range And

The range rule tells us that the standard deviation of a sample is approximately equal to one-fourth of the range of the data. In other words $s = (\text{Maximum} - \text{Minimum})/4$. This is a very straightforward formula to use, and should only be used as a very rough estimate of the standard deviation.

The behavior of an NPN bipolar transistor is largely controlled by the current flowing into the base (i.e., a positive current). For the usual collector-emitter voltage drops (i.e., the active region: positive voltages from a fraction of a volt up to some breakdown voltage) the collector current (I_C) is nearly independent of the collector-emitter voltage (V_{CE}), and instead depends on the ...
