Reading Comprehension Intervention Strategies

Comprehension is the understanding and interpretation of what is read. To be able to accurately understand written material, children need to be able to (1) decode what they read; (2) make connections between what they read and what they already know; and (3) think deeply about what they have read.

In my first blog post in this series I explored the difference between reading comprehension strategies and reading skills. I noted that many of the skills that are tested in the KS2 SATs also have a matching reading comprehension strategy. With the conclusion that the deliberate use of strategies develops and embeds skills, I posed a question to myself:

"Phonemic Awareness is the critical foundation upon which reading skills are built. It is much easier for a student to learn to read print, when they are already aware of how the sounds of language work. Through phonemic awareness training, students learn that words are made up of single speech sounds or "phonemes." The sounds are connected to the symbols (graphemes) of our
