The Global Macro Edge

South of San Francisco lies a small stretch of the famous California Highway 1 notoriously known by locals as The Devil's Slide. The stunning view along this road is supported by a weak and steep foundation of loose rock, and porous soil that has been increasingly eroding away over the years sweeping cars, pavement and [...]

Many know I've been calling for a global earnings recession since May 2018.. It all started when I saw a sharp collapse in the South Korean Export Growth Indicator - aka SKEG (a highly accurate, yet-barely-followed, metric). I've written many times before on the importance of SKEG. But for those that need refreshing - here's a summary.
